The Protracted Permo Triassic Crisis

The Permo-Triassic mass extinction consists of two phases, the end-Guadalupian and the PTB. Its recovery lasted the entire Early Triassic. $\delta^{13}\text{C}$ carb perturbations occurred from the late Wuchiapingian to the end of the Early Triassic and were also multi-phase. The protracted Late Permian–Early Triassic crisis, lasting 15 Myr, was a period of great change.

Therefore, the Permian–Triassic crisis was protracted, and spanned Late Permian and Early Triassic time. The extinction associated with the PTB occurred in two episodes, the main act with a ...

The protracted Late Permian–Early Triassic crisis decline in diversity and shell structure should persist from the end of the Guadalupian to the PTB, and be 1.1. The biotic crisis related to environmental causes, such as sea-level changes.

Permian–Triassic extinction event. The Permian–Triassic (P-Tr or P-T) extinction event, colloquially known as the Great Dying, the End-Permian Extinction or the Great Permian Extinction, occurred about 252 Ma (million years) ago, forming the boundary between the Permian and Triassic geologic periods,...

Environmental and Biotic Changes during the Paleozoic ...

The variable environmental conditions that began during the end-Guadalupian transition and favored molluscan dominance ultimately culminated in the catastrophic end-Permian mass extinction, demonstrating that, although the extinction's effects on global biodiversity were rapid and abrupt, the Permian–Triassic ecological crisis was considerably more protracted.

Prolonged Permian-Triassic ecological crisis recorded by ...

Permian extinction, also called Permian-Triassic extinction or end-Permian extinction, a series of extinction pulses that contributed to the greatest mass extinction in Earth's history. Many geologists and paleontologists contend that the Permian extinction occurred over the course of 15 million years during the latter part of the Permian Period (299 million to 252 million years ago).

The end-Permian mass extinction was the most severe biodiversity crisis in Earth history. To better constrain the timing, and ultimately the causes of this event, we collected a suite of geochronologic, isotopic, and biostratigraphic data on several well-preserved sedimentary sections in South China. High-precision U-Pb dating reveals that the extinction peak occurred just before 252.28 ± 0 ...

occurred through a similar period, from the Late Wuchiapingian to the end of the Early Triassic. Therefore, the Permian-Triassic crisis was protracted, and spanned Late Permian and Early Triassic time. The mass extinction at the Permian-Triassic Boundary (PTB) is said to have been abrupt (at the base of bed 25)
